Lab Final Exam Details

Practical Lab Exam (worth 20%)

- You do not need to change your partner into a gown, but gowning instructions must be stated if the examination requires that the patient would need to change in real life.This would include an explanation of what needs to be removed, and how to put on thegown.

- You need to describe all the artifacts that need to be removed for the study you are doing. This includes exactly what clothing needs to be removed; jewelry; hearing aids, dentures, piercings, hairclips, etc.

- Remember to ask personal information inside the examining room, and to maintain patient dignity and safety at all times. The standard answer for LMP is "one week ago". Base your questioning on the patient information given on the requisition.

- Instructors will not comment on the quality of your positioning during the exam. Once you have "taken" the exposure for a given view, you cannot make any more changes to the positioning, and you cannot position the same view twice. However, if you completely forget to do a routine view, and still have time left on the clock to complete it,you can go ahead and do so.

- Cursing, or inappropriate language of any sort, used in front of the patient, or during the lab exam is not acceptable, and so marks will be removed from the "Communication" category.

Using the Worklist:

- Select the correct patient
- Ensure you select the correct accession number when “exposing”
- Double check the accession numbers!
